PREFACE.

IT bath often been observed with Concern, that the Study of the Laws of our Country bath been totally neglected in the usual Education of ENGLISH Gentlemen; and, in particular, that no Opportunities of cultivating this Branch of Learning bave bitherto been afforded in those excellent and illustrious Seminaries, wherein every other Science is taught in it's utmost Perfection. To remedy, in some little Degree, so just a Complaint, the Compiler of the following Sheets was induced about three Years ago to institute, and fince to continue, a Course of Lectures, calculated for the Promotion of this Study in the University of Oxford. And as be was encouraged to enter upon this Undertaking by Gentlemen, both in the University and out of it, for whose Learning and Judgment the World has the highest Deference; so be cannot but acknowlege, with due Gratitude, the favourable Reception which bath been given it: A Mark of Approbation, which be is sensible must be attributed entirely to the Propriety of the Defign, and not to the Manner of it's Execution.

In order to render this Attempt more extensively useful, he thought it incumbent upon him to accommodate modate bis Lectures, not only to the Use of such Students, as were more immediately defigned for the Profession of the common Law; but also of such other Gentlemen, as were defirous of some general Acquaintance with the Constitution and legal Polity of their native Country. He therefore made it his first Endeavour, to mark out a Plan of the Laws of ENGLAND, so comprehensive, as that every Title might be reduced under some or other of it's general Heads, which the Student might afterwards purfue to any Degree of Minuteness; and at the same time fo contracted, that the Gentleman might with tolerable Application contemplate and understand the Whole. For if this was successfully performed, be apprehended be sould then be enabled, with greater Perspicuity and Ease, to execute the Remainder of bis Design; in deducing the History and Antiquities of the principal Branches of Law, in selecting and illustrating their fundamental Principles and leading Rules, in explaining their Utility and Reason, and in comparing them with the Laws of Nature and of other Nations.

In the Pursuit of these his Endeavours, he found himself obliged to adopt a Method, in many respects totally new. The most early, and indeed the most valuable, of those who have laboured in reducing our Laws to a System, are GLANVIL, and BRACTON, BRITTON, and the Author of FLETA: But these, and all others who preceded King Henry the eighth, are so occupied in antient (he does not say useles) useless) Learning, that it had been but an awkward Attempt to engraft on their Stock the Improvements of later Ages .- FITZHERBERT, and BROOK, and the fubsequent Authors of Abridgments, have chosen a Method, the least adapted of any to convey the Rudiments of a Science; namely, that of the Alphabet. - Lord BACON, in his Elements, bath purposely avoided any regular Order; selecting only Some distinct and dis-joined Apporisms, according to his own Account of them; which bowever he bath expounded in so excellent a Manner, that the Narrowness of his Plan is therefore the more to be regretted.—The Institutes of Sir EDWARD COKE are unfortunately as deficient in Method, as they are rich in Matter: at leaft, the two first Parts of them; wherein, acting only the Part of a Commentator, he bath thrown together an infinite Treafure of Learning in a loofe defultory Order. - Dr. COWED bath indeed endeavoured to reduce the Law of ENGLAND, in bis Latin Institutions, to the Model of those of JUSTINIAN: And we cannot be surprized, that so forced and unnatural a Contrivance should be lame and defective in it's Execution. Sir HENRY FINCH's Discourse of Law is a Treatife of a very different Character: His Method is greatly Superior to all that were before extant; bis Text is weighty, concife, and nervous; bis Illustrations are apposite, clear, and authentic. But, with all these Advantages, it is not sufficiently adapted to modern Use; since the subsequent Alterations of the Law, by the Abolition of military, Tenures, and the Difuse of real Actions, have rendered dered near balf of his Book obsolete. - Dr. Wood bas effectually removed this Objection, but has fallen into the contrary Extreme; his Institute being little more than Finch's Discourse enlarged, and so thoroughly modernized, as to leave us frequently in the Dark, with regard to the Reason and Original of many fill subfifting Laws, which are founded in remote Antiquity. And as in some Titles bis Plan is too contracted, in others also it seems to be too diffuse. Upon the Whole however his Work is undoubtedly a valuable Performance; and great are the Obligations of the Student to bim, and bis Predecessor Finch, for their bappy Progress in reducing the Elements of Law from their former Chaos to a regular methodical Science. Yet, as neither could be followed entirely in the proposed Course of academical Lectures, it was judged the most eligible Way not to adopt them in Part; especially as there were extant the Outlines of a still superior Method, sketched by a very masterly Hand.

For, of all the Schemes bitherto made public for digesting the Laws of ENOLAND, the most natural and scientifical of any, as well as the most comprebensive, appeared to be that of Sir MATTHEW HALE, in his possibumous Analysis of the Law. This Distribution therefore bath been principally followed; with what Variations, the learned Reader will easily perceive from the ensuing Abstract; and it may be no unprofitable Employment for the Student to learn by comparing them. For these the Compiler thinks it unnecessary to give his Reasons:

For, fince those who have gone before him have successively deviated from each other's Plan, he hopes to be excused, if, in order to adapt some things the better to his own Capacity, he frequently departs from them all; having in general rather chosen, by compounding their several Schemes, to extract a new Method of his own, than implicitly to copy after any.

Indeed bad be closely adhered to HALE's, or any other Distribution, it might probably bave rendered the Task be had undertaken less laborious; at least, it would have faved bim the Trouble of the present Publication. For be soon became sensible of one Inconvenience attending bis Deviation from former Systems: That, in a Course of oral Lectures. on a Science entirely new, and sometimes a little abstruse, it was not always easy for bis Audience fo far to command their attention, as at once to apprehend both the Method and Matter delivered : And, whenever, through Inattention in the Hearers, or (too frequently) through Obscurity in the Reader, any Point of Importance was forgotten or mifunderstood, it became next to impossible to gather up the broken Clue, without having some written Compendium to which they might refort upon Occafion. Thefe Confiderations gave Birth to the following ANALYSIS, which exhibits the Order and principal Divisions, of his Course; and is only to be considered as a larger Syllabus, interspersed with a few Definitions and general Rules, to affer the Recollection of such Gentlemen as have formerly bonoured bim with their Attendance; or such as may bereafter become his Auditors, till this Task shall fall into abler Hands, and the Province, which he originally undertook in a private Capacity, shall be put upon a public Establishment.

To the Analysis is subjoined an Appendix, consisting of such Tables, Copies of Instruments, and Forms of judicial Proceedings, as were judged to be necessary for explaining certain Principles, and Matters of daily Practice; of which it was however impracticable to convey any adequate Idea by werbal Descriptions only. In the Explanation of one of these, (the Table of Descents,) the Compiler hath been obliged to enter into a minute Discussion of a Point liable to some Controversy: This be could have wished to have avoided; but was searful, of either appearing to mislead the Student, had no Notice been taken of Justice Manwood's Doctrine; or perhaps of really misleading him, had that Doctrine been followed in constructing the Table.

With regard to the Book in general, if by any Accident it should fall into other Hands than those for whose Use it is designed, the Author hopes it will meet with that Candor which is ever the Companion of sound Learning. The Gentlemen of his own Profession, he is consident, will suspend their Censures of whatever (in this Abstract) may appear either dubious or unwarrantable; at least till they are informed how far (in the Work at large) it is guarded by Restrictions, qualified by Exceptions, or supported by Reason and Authority. And in the end, he must beg leave to apply to his whole Undertaking, as well as to this tristing Performance, the Words of his Master Littleton: "Jeo ne voill

"que tu crez, que tout ceo que jeo ay dit en
"lez ditez Lyvers soit Ley; quar jeo ne ceo voill
"emprendre, ne presumer sur moy.—"Nient

"motes et specysiez en lez ditez Lyvers, ne sont
"pas Ley, uncore tielx Choses ferront toy plus apte et able de entendre et apprendre lez Argu"mentez et lez Reasons del Ley.

Thus much be thought it necessary to premise before the former Editions of the ANALYSIS, in 1756 and 1757. But the Book having, by some means or other, met with a more general Reception out of the University than be ever apprehended it could bave done, and another Impression being called for, be thought it incumbent upon bim, by revising and correcting what Inaccuracies had formerly escaped bim, and adding a greater Variety of Precedents and Forms in the ARPENDIX, to make it in some degree less unworthy the public Regard. When this was done, and the Sheets were just ready for Publication, be received the very fingular Honour from the University of being elected their first Professor of municipal Law, upon the public Establishment binted at in a former Page, with an ample Endowment from the Efects of the late Mr. VINER. His introductory introductory Lecture upon that Occasion being ordered to the Press, at the instance of the Governors of the University, was also thought proper to be presized to this Work; not only on account of their evident Connenion with each other, but also to relieve the Attention of the Reader by some Enquiries more interesting and amusing, than the dry Method of analytical Distribution, or the dull Forms of Conveyancing and Entries.

St diede Christen ettechten in it at Isia HE general expectation of fo numerous and respectable an audience, the novelty, and (I may add) the importance of the duty required from this chair, must unavoidably be productive of great diffidence and apprehensions in him who has the honour to be placed in it. He must be sensible how much will depend upon his conduct in the infancy of a study, which is now first adopted by public academical authority; which has generally been reputed (however unjustly) of a dry and unfruitful nature; and of which the theoretical, elementary parts have hitherto received a very moderate share of cultivation. He cannot but reflect that, if either his plan of instruction be crude and injudicious, or the execution of it lame and superficial, it will cast a damp upon the farther progress of this most useful and most rational branch of learning; and may defeat for a time the public-public-spirited design of our wise and munificent benefactor. And this he must more especially dread, when he feels by experience how unequal his abilities are (unaffifted by preceding examples) to complete, in the manner he could wish, so extensive and arduous a task; since he freely confesses, that his former more private attempts have fallen very fhort of his own ideas of perfection. And yet the candour he has already experienced, and this last transcendent mark of regard, his present nomination by the free and unanimous suffrage of a great and learned university, (an honour to be ever remembered with the deepest and most affectionate gratitude) these testimonies of your public judgment must entirely superfede bis own, and forbid him to believe himself totally infufficient for the labour at least of this employment. One thing he will venture to hope for, and it certainly shall be his constant aim, by diligence and attention to atone for his other defects : efteeming, that the best return, which he can posfibly make for your favourable opinion of his capacity, will be his unwearied endeavours in some litthe degree to deferve it. be inder more

The fcience thus committed to his charge, to be cultivated, methodized, and explained in a course of academical lectures, is that of the laws and constitutions of our own country: a species of knowlege, in which the gentlemen of England have been more remarkably deficient than those of all Eusope besides. In most of the nations on the continent, where afuitful name; and of which the the-

where the civil or imperial law under different modifications is closely interwoven with the municipal laws of the land, no gentleman, or at least no scholar, thinks his education is completed, till he has attended a course or two of lectures, both upon the institutes of Justinian and the local constitutions of his native soil, under the very eminent professors that abound in their several universities. And in the northern parts of our own island, where also the municipal laws are frequently connected with the civil, it is difficult to meet with a person of liberal education, who is destitute of a competent knowledge in that science, which is to be the guardian of his natural rights and the rule of his civil conduct.

Non have the imperial laws been totally neglected even in the english nation. A general acquaintance with their decisions has ever been defervedly confidered as no small accomplishment of a gentleman; and a fashion has prevailed, especially of late, to transport the growing hopes of this island to foreign universities, in Switzerland, Germany, and Holland; which, though infinitely inferior to our own in every other confideration, have been looked upon as better nurferies of the civil, or (which is nearly the fame) of their own municipal law. In the mean time it has been the peculiar lot of our admirable fystem of laws, to be neglected, and even unknown, by all but one practical profession; though built upon - note of the bird of the I bed and the the

and heal in the more mentioning the in at least in FAR be it from me to derogate from the fludy of the civil law, confidered (apart from any binding authority) as a collection of written reason. No man is more thoroughly perfuaded of the general excellence of it's rules, and the usual equity of it's decisions; nor is better convinced of it's use as well as ornament to the scholar, the divine, the statesman, and even, the common lawyer. But we must not carry our veneration so far as to facrifice our Alfred and Edward to the manes of Theodofrus and Justinian : we must not prefer the edict of the prætor, or the rescript of the roman emperor, to our own immemorial customs, or the fanctions of an english parliament; unless we can also prefer the despotic monarchy of Rome and Byzantium, for whose meridians the former were calculated, to the free constitution of Britain. which the latter are adapted to perpetuate. of late, to tradport the crowing lapes of the

Without detracting therefore from the real merit which abounds in the imperial law, I hope I may have leave to affert, that if an Englishman must be ignorant of either the one or the other, he had better be a stranger to the roman than the english institutions. For I think it an undeniable position, that a competent knowledge of the laws of that society, in which we live, is the proper accomplishment of every gentleman and scholar; an highly useful, I had almost said essential.

tial, part of liberal and polite education. And in this I am warranted by the example of antient Rome; where, as Cicero informs us*, the very boys were obliged to learn the twelve tables by heart as a carmen necessarium or indispensable lesson to imprint on their tender minds an early knowledge of the laws and constitutions of their country.

But as the long and universal neglect of this study, with us in England, seems in some degree to call in question the truth of this evident position, it shall therefore be the business of this introductory lecture, in the first place to demonstrate the utility of some general acquaintance with the municipal law of the land, by pointing out its particular uses in all considerable situations of life. Some conjectures will then be offered with regard to the causes of neglecting this useful study: to which will be subjoined a few reflexions on the peculiar propriety of reviving it in our own universities.

And, first, to demonstrate the utility of some acquaintance with the laws of the land, let us only reflect a moment on the singular frame and polity of that land, which is governed by this system of laws. A land, perhaps the only one in the universe, in which political or civil liberty is the very end and scope of the constitution. This liberty, rightly understood, consists in the power of doing whatever the laws permit *; which is only to be effected by a general conformity of all orders and degrees to those equitable rules of action, by which the meanest individual is protected from the insults and oppression of the greatest. As therefore every subject is interested in the preservation of the laws, it is incumbent upon every man to be acquainted with those at least, with which he is immediately concerned; left he incur the cenfure as well as inconvenience, of living in fociety without knowing the obligations which it lays him under. And thus much may fuffice for persons of inferior condition, who have neither time nor capacity to enlarge their views beyond that contracted sphere in which they are appointed to move. But those, on whom nature and fortune have be-Rowed more abilities and greater leifure, cannot be so easily excused. These advantages are given them, not for the benefit of themselves only. but also of the public: and yet they cannot in any scene of life, discharge properly their duty either to the public or themselves, without some degree of knowledge in the laws. To evince this the more clearly, it may not be amiss to descend to a few particulars.

LET us therefore begin with our gentlemen of independent estates and fortune, the most useful as well as considerable body of men in the nation; whom even to suppose ignorant in this branch of learning is treated by Mr. Locke as a strange absurdity. It is their landed property, with it's long and voluminous train of descents and conveyances, settlements, entails, and incumbrances, that forms the most intricate and most extensive object of legal knowlege. The thorough comprehension of these, in all their minute distinctions, is perhaps too laborious a task for any but a lawyer by profession: yet still the understanding of a few leading principles, relating to estates and conveyancing, may form some check and guard upon a gentleman's inferior agents, and preserve him at least from very gross and notorious imposition.

Again, the policy of all laws has made some forms necessary in the wording of last wills and testaments, and more with regard to their attestation. An ignorance in these must always be of dangerous consequence, to such as by choice or necessity compile their own testaments without any technical assistance. Those who have attended the courts of justice are the best witnesses of the confusion and distresses that are hereby occasioned in families; and of the difficulties that arise in discerning the true meaning of the testator, or sometimes in discovering any meaning at all: so that in the end his estate may often be vested quite contrary to these his enigmatical intentions, in the but . Education, §. 187, and the city sisks because perhaps he has omitted one or two formal words, which are necessary to ascertain the sense with indisputable legal precision, or has executed his will in the presence of sewer witnesses than the law requires.

Bur to proceed from private concerns to those of a more public consideration. All gentlemen of fortune are, in consequence of their property, liable to be called upon to establish the rights, to estimate the injuries, to weigh the accusations, and fometimes to dispose of the lives of their fellow-fubjects, by ferving upon juries. In this fituation they are frequently to decide, and that upon their oaths, questions of nice importance, in the folution of which some legal skill is requisite; especially where the law and the fact, as it often happens, are intimately blended together. And the general incapacity, even of our best juries, to do this with any tolerable propriety has greatly debased their authority; and has unavoidably thrown more power into the hands of the judges. to direct, control, and even reverse their verdicts. than perhaps the constitution intended.

But it is not as a juror only that the english gentleman is called upon to determine questions of right, and distribute justice to his fellow-subjects: it is principally with this order of men that the commission of the peace is filled. And here a very ample field is opened for a gentleman to exert his talents, by maintaining good order in his his neighbourhood; by punishing the dissolute and idle; by protecting the peaceable and industrious; and, above all, by healing petty differences and preventing vexatious profecutions. But, in order to attain these desirable ends, it is necessary that the magistrate should understand his business: and have not only the will but the power also, (under which must be included the knowlege) of administring legal and effectual justice. Else, when he has mistaken his authority, through passion, through ignorance, or abfurdity, he will be the object of contempt from his inferiors, and of cenfure from those to whom he is accountable for his conduct.

YET further; most gentlemen of considerable property, at some period or other in their lives. are ambitious of representing their country in parliament; and those, who are ambitious of receiving so high a trust, would also do well to remember it's nature and importance. They are not thus honourably diftinguished from the rest of their fellow-subjects, merely that they may privilege their persons, their estates, or their domestics: that they may lift under party banners; may grant or with-hold supplies; may vote with or vote against a popular or unpopular administration; but upon confiderations far more interesting and important. They are the guardians of the english constitution; the makers, repealers, and interpreters of the english laws; delegated to watch. to check, and to avert every dangerous innovation.

to propose, to adopt, and to cherish any solid and well-weighed improvement; bound by every tie of nature, of honour, and of religion, to transmit that constitution and those laws to their posterity, amended if possible, at least without any derogation. And how unbecoming must it appear in a member of the legislature to vote for a new law, who is utterly ignorant of the old! what kind of interpretation can he be enabled to give, who is a stranger to the text upon which he comments!

INDEED it is really amazing, that there should be no other state of life, no other occupation, art or science, in which some method of instruction. is not looked upon as requifite, except only the science of legislation, the noblest and most difficult of any. Apprenticeships are held necessary to almost every art, commercial or mechanical: a long course of reading and study must form the divine, the physician, and the practical professor of the laws: but every man of superior fortune thinks himself born a legislator. Yet Tully was of a different opinion: "It is necessary, fays he , for a " fenator to be thoroughly acquainted with the "constitution; and this, he declares, is a know-" lege of the most extensive nature; a matter of "fcience, of diligence, of reflexion; without which no fenator can possibly be fit for his office."

^{*} De Legg. III. 18. Est senatori necessarium nosse rempublicam; idque late patet:—genus boc omne scientia, diligentia, memoria est; sine quo paratus esse senator nullo pacto potest.

THE mischiefs that have arisen to the public from inconfiderate alterations in our laws, are too obvious to be called in question; and how far they have been owing to the defective education of our fenators, is a point well worthy the public attention. The common law of England has fared like other venerable edifices of antiquity, which rash and unexperienced workmen have ventured to new dress and refine, with all the rage of modern improvement. Hence frequently it's fymmetry has been deftroyed, it's proportions difforted. and it's majeftic simplicity exchanged for specious' embellishments and fantastic novelties. For, to fay the truth, almost all the perplexed questions, almost all the niceties, intricacies, and delays (which have fometimes difgraced the english, as well as other, courts of justice) owe their original not to the common law itself, but to innovations that have been made in it by acts of parliament; overladen (as lord Coke expresses it *) with pro-" vifoes and additions, and many times on a fud-" den penned or corrected by men of none or very little judgment in law." This great and well-experienced judge declares, that in all his time he never knew two questions made upon rights merely depending upon the common law; and warmly laments the confusion introduced by illjudging and unlearned legislators. " But if, he " fubjoins, acts of parliament were after the old " fashion penned, by such only as perfectly knew " what the common law was before the making of any act of parliament concerning that matter, as " also how far forth former statutes had provided remedy for former mischiefs and defects disco-" vered by experience; then should very few " questions in law arise, and the learned should not " fo often and fo much perplex their heads to make of atonement and peace, by construction of law, between infensible and disagreeing words, fen-" tences, and provisoes, as they now do." And if this inconvenience was so heavily felt in the reign of queen Elizabeth, you may judge how the evil is increased in later times, when the statute book is fwelled to ten times a larger bulk; unless it should be found, that the penners of our modern statutes have proportionably better informed themselves in the knowlege of the common law.

What is faid of our gentlemen in general, and the propriety of their application to the study of the laws of their country, will hold equally strong or still stronger with regard to the nobility of this realm, except only in the article of serving upon juries. But, instead of this, they have several peculiar provinces of far greater consequence and concern; being not only by birth hereditary counsellors of the crown, and judges upon their honour of the lives of their brother-peers, but also arbiters of the property of all their fellow-subjects, and that in the last resort. In this their judicial capacity they are bound to decide the nicest and most critical points of the law; to examine and correct correct such errors as have escaped the most experienced sages of the profession, the lord keeper and the judges of the courts at Westminster. Their sentence is final, decisive, irrevocable: no appeal, no correction, not even a review can be had: and to their determination whatever it be, the inferior courts of justice must conform; otherwise the rule of property would no longer be uniform and steady.

SHOULD a judge in the most subordinate jurisdiction be deficient in the knowlege of the law, it would reflect infinite contempt upon himself and diffrace upon those who employ him. And yet the confequence of his ignorance is comparatively very trifling and fmall: his judgment may be examined, and his errors rectified by other courts. But how much more ferious and affecting is the case of a superior judge, if without any skill in the laws he will boldly venture to decide a question, upon which the welfare and subsistence of whole families may depend! where the chance of his judging right, or wrong, is barely equal; and where, if he chances to judge wrong, he does an injury of the most alarming nature, an injury without possibility of redress!

YET, vaft as this trust is, it can no where be so properly reposed as in the noble hands where our excellent constitution has placed it: and therefore placed it, because, from the independence of their fortune and the dignity of their station, they are presumed frequence of both, in attaining a more extensive knowlege of the laws than persons of inferior rank: and because the founders of our polity relied upon that delicacy of sentiment, so peculiar to noble birth; which, as on the one hand it will prevent either interest or affection from interfering in questions of right, so on the other it will bind a peer in honour, an obligation which the law esteems equal to another's oath, to be master of those points upon which it is his birthright to decide,

THE romanipandeds will funish us with a piece of history not unapplicable to our present purpose, Servius Sulpicius, a gentleman of the patrician order, and a celebrated orator, had occasion to take the opinion of Quintus Mutius Scaevola, the oracle of the roman law; but for want of being converfant in that science, could not so much as understand even the technical terms, which his counsel was obliged to make use of. Upon which Mutius Scaevola could not forbear to upbraid him with this memorable reproof, " that it was a shame for a pa-"trician, ainobleman, and an orator to be igno-" rant of the law under which he lived." Which reproach made so deep an impression on Sulpicius. that he immediately applied himself to the study of the law; wherein he arrived to that proficiency, that he left behind him about a hundred and four-fcore volumes of his own compiling upon the fubject; and became, in the opinion of Cicero t, a much more compleat lawyer than even Murius Scaevola himself.

I would not be thought to recommend to our english nobility and gentry to become as great lawyers as Sulpicius; though he, together with this character, sustained likewise that of an excellent orator, a firm patriot, and a wise indefatigable senator; but the inference which arises from the story is this, that ignorance of the laws of the land hathever been esteemed dishonourable, in those who are entrusted by their country to maintain, to administer, and to amend them.

But furely there is little occasion to enforce this argument any farther to persons of rank and distinction, if we of this place may be allowed to form a general judgment from those who are under our inspection: happy, that while we lay down the rule, we can also produce the example. You will therefore permit your professor to indulge both a public and private satisfaction by bearing this open testimony, that in the very infancy of these studies among us, they were savoured with the most diligent attendance, and pursued with the most unwearied application, by those of the noblest birth and most ample patrimony: some of whom are still the ornaments of this seat of learning; and others at a greater distance continue doing honour to it's institutions, by comparing our polity and laws with those of other kingdoms abroad, or exerting their senatorial abilities in the councils of the nation at home.

Nor will fome degree of legal knowlege be found in the least superfluous to persons of inferior rank: especially those of the learned professions. The clergy in particular, besides the common obligations they are under in proportion to their rank and fortune, have also abundant reason, confidered merely as clergymen, to be acquainted with many branches of the law, which are almost peculiar and appropriated to themselves alone. Such are the laws relating to advowfons, institutions, and inductions; to fimony, and fimoniacal contracts; to uniformity, residence, and pluralities; to tithes and other ecclesiastical dues; to marriages (more especially of late) and to a variety of other subjects, which are configned to the care of their order by the provisions of particular statutes. To understand these aright, to differn what is warranted or enjoined, and what is forbidden by law, demands a fort of legal apprehenfion; which is no otherwife to be acquired than by use and a familiar acquaintance with legal writers.

For the gentlemen of the faculty of physic, I must must frankly own that I see no special reason, why they in particular should apply themselves to the study of the law; unless in common with other gentlemen, and to complete the character of general and extensive knowlege; a character which their profession, beyond others, has remarkably deserved. They will give me leave however to suggest, and that not sudicrously, that it might frequently be of use to families upon sudden emergencies, if the physician were acquainted with the doctrine of last wills and testaments, at least so far as relates to the formal part of their execution.

Bur those gentlemen who intend to profess the civil and ecclefiaftical laws in the spiritual and maritime courts of this kingdom, are of all men (next to common lawyers) the most indispensably obliged to apply themselves seriously to the study of our municipal laws. For the civil and canon laws, confidered with respect to any intrinsic obligation, have no force or authority in this kingdom: they are no more binding in England than our laws are binding at Rome. But as far as these foreign laws, on account of some peculiar propriety, have in fome particular cases, and in some particular courts, been introduced and allowed by our laws. so far they oblige, and no farther; their authority being wholly founded upon that permission and adoption. In which we are not fingular in our notions; for even in Holland, where the imperial law is much cultivated and it's decisions pretty generally followed, we are informed by Van Leeuwen that " it receives it's force from cuftom and " the confent of the people, either tacitly or ex-" prefly given : for otherwise, he adds, we should "no more be bound by this law, than by that of " the Almains, the Franks, the Saxons, the Goths, the Vandals, and other of the antient nations." Wherefore in all points in which the different fyltems depart from each other, the law of the land takes place of the law of Rome, whether antient or modern, imperial or pontificial. And in those of our english courts wherein a reception has been allowed to the civil and canon laws, if either they exceed the bounds of that reception. by extending themselves to other matters, than are permitted to them; or if fuch courts proceed according to the decisions of those laws, in cases wherein it is controlled by the law of the land, the common law in either instance both may, and frequently does, prohibit and annul their proceedingst: and it will not be a fufficient excuse for them to tell the king's courts at Westminster. that their practice is warranted by the laws of Justinian or Gregory, or is conformable to the decrees of the Rota or imperial chamber. For which reason it becomes highly necessary for every civilian and canonist that would act with safety as a judge, or with prudence and reputation as an advocate, to know in what cases and how far the english laws have given fanction to the roman; in what points

the latter are rejected; and where they are both fo intermixed and blended together, as to form certain supplemental parts of the common law of England, diftinguished by the titles of the king's maritime, the king's military, and the king's ecclefiaftical law. The propriety of which enquiry the university of Oxford has for more than a century To thoroughly feen, that in her flatutes * The appoints, that one of the three questions to be annually discussed at the act by the jurist-inceptors shall relate to the common law; subjoining this reason, " quia juris civilis studiosos decet band imperitos esse " juris municipalis, & differentias exteri patriique " juris notas babere." And the university of Cambridge, in her flatutes t, has declared herfelf to the same effect.

From the general use and necessity of some acquaintance with the common law, the inference were extremely easy, with regard to the propriety of the present institution, in a place to which gentlemen of all ranks and degrees resort, as the sountain of all useful knowlege. But how it has come to pass that a design of this sort has never before taken place in the university, and the reason why the study of our laws has in general fallen into disuse, I shall previously proceed to enquire.

^{*} Tit. VII. Sect. 2. §. 2. + Cowelli Instit. Jur. Anglican, in Proemio.

SIR John Fortescue, in his panegyric on the laws of England, (which was written in the reign of Henry the fixth) puts a very obvious question in the mouth of the young prince, whom he is exhorting to apply himself to that branch of learning; " why the laws of England, being for good, fo " fruitful, and fo commodious, are not taught in "the univerlities, as the civil and canon laws are?" In answer to which he gives t what seems, with due deference be it spoken, a very jejune and unsatisfactory reason; being in short, that " as the pro-" ceedings at common law were in his time carried "on in three different tongues, the english, the " latin, and the french, that science must be ne-" ceffarily taught in those three several languages; but that in the univerlities all sciences were " taught in the latin tongue only; and therefore " he concludes, that they could not be convenient-" ly taught or studied in our universities." But without attempting to examine seriously the validity of this reason, (the very shadow of which by the wisdom of your late constitutions is entirely taken away) we perhaps may find out a better, or at least a more plaufible account, why the study of the municipal laws has been banished from these seats of science, than what the learned chancellor thought it prudent to give to his royal pupil.

THAT antient collection of unwritten maxims and customs, which is called the common law, however compounded or from whatever fountains derived, had subsisted immemorially in this kingdom, and, though somewhat altered and impaired by the violence of the times, had in great meafure weathered the rude shock of the norman conquest. This had endeared it to the people in general, as well because it's decisions were universally. known, as because it was found to be excellently adapted to the genius of the english nation. In the knowlege of this law confifted great part of the learning of those dark ages, it was then taught, fays Mr. Selden*, in the monasteries, in the universities, and in the families of the principal nobility. The clergy in particular, as they then engroffed almost every other branch of learning, fo (like their predecessors the british druids+) they were peculiarly remarkable for their proficiency in the study of the law. Nullus clericus nifi caufidicus, is the character given of them foon after the conquest by William of Malmsbury t. The judges therefore were usually created out of the facred order s, as was likewise the case among the normans | s and all the inferior offices were supplied by the lower elergy, which has occasioned their successors to be denominated clerks to this day.

Bur the common law of England, being not committed to writing, but only handed down by tradition, use, and experience, was not so heartily relished by the foreign clergy; who came over hither in shoals during the reign of the conqueror and his two fons, and were utter strangers to our constitution as well as our language. And an aceident, which foon after happened, had nearly completed it's ruin. A copy of Justinian's pandects, being newly * discovered at Amalfi, soon brought the civil law into vogue all over the west of Europe, where before it was quite laid afide + and in a manner forgotten; though some traces of it's authority remained in Italy I and the eastern provinces of the empire §. This now became in a particular manner the favourite of the popish clergy, who borrowed the method and many of the maxims of their canon law from this original. The study of it was introduced into several universities abroad, particularly that of Bologna; where exercises were performed, lectures read, and degrees conferred in this faculty, as in other branches of science; and many nations on the continent, just then beginning to recover from the convulfions confequent upon the overthrow of the roman empire, and fettling by degrees into peaceable forms of government, adopted the civil law, (being the best written system then extant) as the basis of their several constitutions; blending and interweaving it among their own feodal customs, in some places with a more extensive, in others a more confined authority *.

Nor was it long before the prevailing mode of the times reached England. For Theobald, a norman abbot, being elected to the fee of Canterbufyt, and extremely addicted to this new study, brought over with him in his retinue many learned proficients therein; and among the rest Roger furnamed Vacarius, whom he placed in the university of Oxford; to teach it to the people of this country. But it did not meet with the same easy reception in England, where a mild and rational fystem of laws had been long established, as it did upon the continent; and, though the monkish clergy (devoted to the will of a foreign primate) received it with eagerness and zeal, yet the laity who were more interested to preserve the old conflitution; and had already feverely felt the effect of many norman innovations, continued wedded to the use of the common law. King Stephen immediately published a proclamation s, forbidding the study of the laws, then newly imported from Italy; which was treated by the monks as a piece of impiety, and, though it might prevent the introduction of the civil law process into our courts of justice, yet did not hinder the clergy from reading

FROM this time the nation feems to have been divided into two parties; the bishops and clergy. many of them foreigners, who applied themselves wholly to the study of the civil and canon laws, which now came to be inseparably interwoven with each other; and the nobility and laity, who adhered with equal pertinacity to the old common law; both of them reciprocally jealous of what they were unacquainted with, and neither of them perhaps allowing the opposite system that real merit which is abundantly to be found in each. This appears on the one hand from the spleen with which the monastic writers * speak of our municipal laws upon all occasions; and, on the other. from the firm temper which the nobility shewed at the famous parliament of Merton; when the prelates endeavoured to procure an act, to declare all baftards legitimate in case the parents intermarried at any time afterwards; alleging this only reason, because holy church (that is, the canon law) declared fuch children legitimate; but "all the earls " and barons (fays the parliament roll +) with one " voice answered, that they would not change the " laws of England, which have hitherto been used and approved." And we find the same jealousy prevailing above a century afterwards, when the nobility declared with a kind of prophetic spirit, "that the realm of England hath never been unto "this hour, neither by the consent of our lord the king and the lords of parliament shall it e- ever be, ruled or governed by the civil lawt." And of this temper between the clergy and laity many more instances might be given,

WHILE things were in this fituation, the clergy, finding it impossible to root out the municipal law, began to withdraw themselves by degrees from the temporal courts; and to that end, very early in the reign of king Henry the third, epifcopal conflitutions were published 1, forbidding all ecclesiastics to appear as advocates in foro saeculari. nor did they long continue to act as judges there, not caring to take the oath of office which was then found necessary to administred, that they should in all things determine according to the law and custom of this realm $; though they still kept possession of the high office of chancellor, an office then of little juridical power; and afterwards, as it's business increased by degrees, they modelled the process of the court at their own discretion, fame zeal to introduce the rules of the civil, in exclusion of the municipal law. This appears in a particular manner from the foiritual courts of all denominations, from the chancellor's courts in both our univerlities, and from the high court of chancery before-mentioned; in all of which the proceedings are to this day in a course much conformed to the civil law: for which no tolerable reason can be affigned, unless that these courts were all under the immediate direction of the popish ecfiaftics, among whom it was a point of religion to exclude the municipal law; pope Innocent the fourth having * forbidden the very reading of it by the clergy, because it's decisions were not founded on the imperial constitutions, but merely on the customs of the laity. "And if it be considered that our universities began about that period to receive their present form of Scholastic discipline, that they were then, and continued to be till the time of the reformation, entirely under the influence of the popish clergy (fir John Mason the first protestant, being also the first lay, chancellor of Oxford) this will lead us to perceive the reason, why the fludy of the roman laws was in those days of bigotry + purfued with fuch alacrity in thefe

But the principal reason of all, that has hindered the introduction of this branch of learning, is, that the fludy of the common law, being banished from hence in the times of popery, has fallen into a quite different channel, and has hitherto been wholly culti-

But as this long usage and established custom, of ignorance in the laws of the land, begin now to be thought unreasonable; and as by this means the merit of those laws will probably be more generally known; we may hope that the method of studying them will soon revert to it's antient course, and the foundations at least of that science will be laid in the two universities; without being exclusively confined to the channel which it fell into at the times I have been just describing.

For, being then entirely abandoned by the clergy, a few stragglers excepted, the study and practice of it devolved of course into the hands of laymen; who entertained upon their parts a most hearty aversion to the civil law*, and made no scruple to profess their contempt, nay even their ignorance to fit, in the most public manner. But

^{*} Fortesc. de laud. LL. c. 23. † This remarkably appeared in the case of the abbot of Torun, M. 22 E. 3. 14. who had caused a certain prior to be summoned to answer at Avignon for erecting an oratory contra inhibitionem novi operis; by which words Mr. Selden, (in Flet. 8. 5.) very justly understands to be meant the title de novi operis nuntiatione both in the civil and canon laws, (Ff. 39. 1. C. 8. 11. and Decretai. not Extrav. 5. 32.) whereby the erection of any new buildings in prejudice of more antient ones was prohibited. But Skipwith the king's serjeant, and afterwards chief baron of the exchequer, declares them to be flat non-sense; "in ceux parolx, contra inhibitionem novi operis, ny. ad pas intendment:" and justice Schardelow mends the matter but little by informing him, that they signify a restitution in their law; for which reason he very sagely resolves to pay no sort of regard to them. "Ceo n'est que un restitution en lour. "ley, pur que a ceo n' avonus regard, &c."

still, as the ballance of learning was greatly on the side of the clergy, and as the common law was no longer taught, as formerly, in any part of the kingdom, it must have been subjected to many inconveniences, and perhaps would have been gradually lost and overrun by the civil, (a suspicion well justified from the frequent transcripts of Justinian to be met with in Bracton and Fleta) had it not been for a peculiar incident, which happened at a very critical time, and contributed greatly to it's support.

THE incident I mean was the fixing the court of common pleas, the grand tribunal for disputes of property, to be held in one certain fpot; that the feat of ordinary justice might be permanent and notorious to all the nation. Formerly that, in conjunction with all the other fuperior courts, was held before the king's capital justiciary of England, in the aula regis, or fuch of his palaces wherein his royal person resided, and removed with his houshold from one end of the kingdom to the other. This was found to occasion great inconvenience to the fuitors; to remedy which it was made an article of the great charter of liberties, both that of king John and king Henry the third , that " common pleas should no longer follow the king's " court, but be held in some certain place:" in confequence of which they have ever fince been held (a few necessary removals in times of the plague excepted) in the palace of Westminster only. This brought together the professors of the municipal law, who before were dispersed about the kingdom, and formed them into an aggregate body; whereby a society was established of persons, who (as Spelman observes) addicting themselves wholly to the study of the laws of the land, and no longer considering it as a mere subordinate science for the anusement of leisure hours, soon raised those laws to that pitch of persection, which they suddenly attained under the auspices of our english Justinian, king Edward the first.

In consequence of this lucky assemblage, they naturally fell into a kind of collegiate order; and, being excluded from Oxford and Cambridge, found it necessary to establish a new university of their own. This they did by purchafing at various times certain houses (now called the inns of court and of chancery) between the city of Westminster, the place of holding the king's courts, and the city of London; for advantage of ready access to the one, and plenty of provisions in the other t. Here exercises were performed, lectures read, and degrees were at length conferred in the common law as at other univerlities in the canon and civil. The degrees were those of barrifters (first stiled apprentices t from apprendre, to learn) who anfwered to our bachelors; as the ftate and degree of a serjeant, fervientes ad legem, did to that of doctor.

The crown seems to have soon taken under it's protection this infant seminary of common law; and, the more effectually to foster and cherish it, king Henry the third in the nineteenth year of his reign, issued out an order directed to the mayor and sherists of London, commanding that no regent of any law schools within that city should for the future teach law therein t. The word, law, or leges, being a general term, may create some doubt at this distance of time whether the teaching of the civil law, or the common, or both, is hereby restrained. But in either case it tends to the same end. If the civil law only is prohibited,

+ Ne aliquis scholas regens de legibus in eadem civitate de caetero ibidem leges doceat.

^{*} The first mention I have met with in our lawbooks of serjeants or countors, is in the statute of Westm. 1. 3 Edw. 1. c. 29. and in Horn's Mirror, c. 1. §. 10. c. 2. §. 5. c. 3. §. 1: in the fame reign. But M. PARIS in his life of John II, abbot of St. Albans, which he wrote in 1255, 39 Hen. 3. speaks of advocates at the common law, or countors (ques banci narratores vulgariter appellamus) as an order of men well known, And we have an example of the antiquity of the coif in the fame author's history of England, A. D. 1259, in the cafe of one William de Bussy; who, being called to account for his great knavery and mal-practifes, claimed the benefit of his orders, which were totally unsuspected; and to that end voluit ligamenta coifae suae solvere, ut palam monstraret se tonsuram babere clericalem; sed non est permissus.—Satelles vero eum arripiens, non per coifae ligamina fed per guttur eum apprebendens, traxit ad carcerem. And hence Sir H. Spelman conjectures, (Glossar. 335.) that coifs were introduced to hide the tonfure of fuch renegade clerks, as were still tempted to remain in the fecular courts in the quality of advocates or judges, notwithstanding their prohibition by canon.

(which is Mr. Selden's * opinion) it is then a retaliation upon the clergy, who had excluded the common law from their feats of learning. If the municipal law be also included in the restriction, (as fir Edward Coke † understands it, and which the words seem to import) then the intention is evidently this; by preventing private teachers within the walls of the city, to collect all the common lawyers into the one public university, which was newly instituted in the suburbs,

In this juridical university (for such it is insisted to have been by Fortescue ; and fir Edward Coke §) there are two forts of collegiate houses; one called inns of chancery, in which the younger students of the law used to be placed, " learning and studying, fays Fortescue I, "the originals and as it " were the elements of the law; who, profiting " therein, as they grow to ripeness so are they ad-" mitted into the greater inns of the fame fludy, " called the inns of court." And in these inns of both kinds, he goes on to tell us, the knights and barons, with other grandees and noblemen of the realm, did use to place their children, though they did not defire to have them thoroughly learned in the law, or to get their living by it's practice; and that in his time there were about two thousand students at these several inns, all of whom he informs us were filii nobilium, or gentlemen born.

HENCE it is evident that (though under the influence of the monks our univerfities neglected this study, yet) in the time of Henry the fixth it was thought highly necessary and was the universal practice, for the young nobility and gentry to be instructed in the originals and elements of the laws. But by degrees this custom has fallen into distrie; fo that in the reign of queen Elizabeth, fir Edward Coke * does not reckon above a thousand fludents, and the number at present is very confiderably less. Which feems principally owing to thefe reasons: first, because the inns of chancery being now almost totally filled by the inferior branch of the profesfion, they are neither commodious nor proper for the refort of gentlemen of any rank or figure; fo that there are now very rarely any young students entred at the inns of chancery: fecondly, because in the inns of court all forts of regimen and academical fuperintendance, either with regard to morals or studies, are found impracticable and therefore entirely neglected: lastly, because persons of birth and fortune, after having finished their usual courses at the univerlities, have feldom leifure or resolution fufficient to enter upon a new scheme of study at a new place of instruction. Wherefore few gentle, men now refort to the inns of court, but fuch for whom the knowlege of practice is absolutely necesfary; fuch, I mean, as are intended for the profession: the rest of our gentry, (not to say our nobility also) having usually retired to their estates, or visited foreign kingdoms, or entered upon public life, without any instruction in the laws of the land; and indeed with hardly any opportunity of gaining instruction, unless it can be afforded them in these seats of learning.

AND that these are the proper places, for affording affiftances of this kind to gentlemen of all stations and degrees, cannot (I think) with any colour of reason be denied. For not one of the objections. which are made to the inns of court and chancery, and which I have just enumerated, will hold with regard to the univerlities. Gentlemen may here affociate with gentlemen of their own rank and degree. Nor are their conduct and studies left entirely to their own discretion; but regulated by a discipline so wise and exact, yet so liberal, so senfible and manly, that their conformity to it's rules (which does at prefent fo much honour to our youth) is not more the effect of constraint, than of their own inclinations and choice. Neither need they apprehend too long an avocation hereby from their private concerns and amusements, or (what is a more noble object) the fervice of their friends and their country. This study will go hand in hand with their other pursuits; it will obstruct none of them; it will ornament and affift them all.

Bur if, upon the whole, there are any, still we ded to monastic prejudice, that can entertain a doubt how far this study is properly and regularly academical, such persons I am afraid either have not confidered the constitution and design of an university, or else think very meanly of it. It must be a deplorable narrowness of mind, that would confine these seats of infirmation to the limited views of one or two learned professions. To the praise of this age be it spoken, a more open and generous way of thinking begins now univer-fally to prevail. The attainment of liberal and genteel accomplishments, though not of the intellectual fort, has been thought by our wifeft and most affectionate patrons *, and very lately by the whole univerfity +, no small improvement of our antient plan of education; and therefore I may fafely affirm that nothing (how unufual foever) is, under due regulations, improper to be taught in this place, which is proper for a gentleman to learn. But that a science, which distinguishes the criterions of right and wrong; which teaches to establish the one, and prevent, punish, or redress the other: which employs in it's theory the nobleft faculties of the foul, and exerts in it's practice the cardinal virtues of the heart; a science, which is universal in it's use and extent, accommodated to each individual, yet comprehending the whole community; that a science like this should have ever been deemed unnecessary to be studied in an university, is matter of aftonishment and concern. Surely, if it were not before an object of academical knowlege, it was high time to make it one; and to those who can doubt the propriety of it's reception among us (if any fuch there be) we may return an answer in their own way; that ethics are confessedly a branch of academical learning, and Aristotle bimself bas faid, speaking of the laws of his own country, that jurisprudence or the knowlege of those laws is the principal and most * perfect branch of ethics.

^{*} Lord Chancellor CLARENDON, in his dialogue of education, among his tracts, p. 325. appears to have been very folicitous, that it might be made " a part of the ornament of " our learned academies to teach the qualities of riding, " dancing, and fencing, at those hours when more ferious exercises should be intermitted."

FROM a thorough conviction of this truth, our munificent benefactor Mr. VINER, having employed above half a century in amassing materials for new modelling and rendering more commodious the rude fludy of the laws of the land, configned both the plan and execution of these his public-spirited designs to the wisdom of his parent university. Resolving to dedicate his learned labours " to the benefit of posterity and the perpetual ser-" vice of his country +," he was sensible he could not perform his resolutions in a better and more effectual manner, than by extending to the youth of this place those affiftances, of which he so well remembered and so heartily regretted the want. And the fense, which the university has entertained of this ample and most useful benefaction, must appear beyond a doubt from their gratitude in receiving it with all possible marks of esteem; from their alacrity and unexampled dispatch in carrying it into execution; and, above all, from the laws and conflitutions by which they have effectually guarded it from the neglect and abuse to which such institutions are liable. THE advantages that might refult to the science of the law itself, when a little more attended to in these seats of knowledge, perhaps would be very considerable. The leisure and abilities of the learned in these retirements might either suggest expedients, or execute those dictated by wifer heads, for improving it's method, retrenching it's superfluities, and reconciling the little contrarieties, which the practice of many centuries will necessarily create in any human fyftem: a task, which those who are deeply employed in buliness, and the more active scenes of profession, can hardly condescend to engage in. And as to the interest, or (which is the fame) the reputation of the universities themfelves. I may venture to pronounce that if ever this fludy should arrive to any tolerable perfection either here or at Cambridge, the nobility and gentry of this kingdom would not shorten their residence upon this account, nor perhaps entertain a worse opinion of the benefits of academical educa-Neither should it be considered as a matter of light importance, that while we thus extend the pomoeria of univerfity learning, and adopt a new tribe of citizens within these philosophical walls, we interest a very numerous and very powerful profession in the preservation of our rights and revenues.

For I think it is past dispute that those gentlemen, who resort to the inns of court with a view to pursue the profession, will find it expedient (whenever it is practicable) to lay the previous foundations of this, as well as every other science, in one of our learned universities. We may appeal to the experience of every sensible lawyer, whether any thing can be more hazardous or discouraging than the usual entrance on the study of the law. A raw and unexperienced youth, in the most dangedangerous season of life, is transplanted on a sudden into the midft of allurements to pleasure, without any restraint or check but what his own prudence can fuggeft; with no public direction in what course to pursue his enquiries; no private affiftance to remove the diffreffes and difficulties, which will always embarass a beginner. In this fituation he is expected to sequester himself from the world, and by a tedious lonely process to extract the theory of law from a mass of undigested learning; or else by an assiduous attendance on the courts to pick up theory and practice together. fufficient to qualify him for the ordinary run of business. How little therefore is it to be wondered at, that we hear of so frequent miscarriages: that fo many gentlemen of bright imaginations grow weary of fo unpromising a search *, and addict themselves wholly to amusements, or other less innocent pursuits; and that so many persons of moderate capacity confuse themselves at first setting out, and continue ever dark and puzzled during the remainder of their lives!

^{*} Sit HENRY SPELMAN, in the preface to his glossary, gives us a very lively picture of his own distress upon this occasion. "Emist me mater Londinum, juris nostri capessendi gratia; cujus cum westibulum salutassem, reperissemque linguam peregrinam, dialectum barbaram, methodum inconcinimam, molem non ingentem solum sed perpetuis bumeris sustinent nendam, excidit mibi (sateor) animus, &c."

To as Ant december granealth,

THE evident want of some affistance in the rudiments of legal knowlege, has given birth to a practice, which, if ever it had grown to be general, must have proved of extremely pernicious consequence: I mean the custom, by some so very warmly recommended, to drop all liberal education, as of no use to lawyers; and to place them, . in it's stead, at the desk of some skilful attorney; in order to initiate them early in all the depths of practice, and render them more dextrous in the mechanical part of business. A few instances of particular persons, (men of excellent learning, and unblemished integrity) who, in spight of this method of education, have shone in the foremost ranks of the bar, have afforded fome kind of fanction to this illiberal path to the profession, and biassed many parents, of shortlighted judgment, in it's favous: not confidering, that there are some geniuses, formed to overcome all disadvantages, and that from fuch particular inftances no general rules can be formed; nor observing, that those very persons have frequently recommended, by the most forcible of all examples, the disposal of their own offspring, a very different foundation of legal studies, a regular academical education. Perhaps too, in return, I could now direct their eyes to our principal feats of justice, and suggest a few hints. in favour of university learning:-but in these all who who hear me, I know, have already prevented me.

Making therefore due allowance for one or two shining exceptions, experience may teach us to foretell that a lawyer thus educated to the bar, in subservience to attorneys and solicitors, will find he has begun at the wrong end. If practice be the whole he is taught, practice must also be the whole he will ever know: if he be uninstructed in the elements and first principles upon which the rule of practice is founded, the least variation from established precedents will totally distract and bewilder him: ita lex scripta est is the utmost his knowlege will arrive at; he must never aspire to form, and seldom expect to comprehend, any arguments drawn a priori, from the spirit of the laws and the natural foundations of justice.

Nor is this all; for (as few persons of birth, or fortune, or even of scholastic education, will submit to the drudgery of servitude and the manual labour of copying the trash of an office) should this infatuation prevail to any considerable degree, we must rarely expect to see a gentleman of distinction or learning at the bar. And what the consequence may be, to have the interpretation and enforcement of the laws (which include the entire disposal of our properties, liberties, and lives) fall wholly into the hands of obscure or illiterate men, is matter of very public concern.

· forciell that a fluor of thus educated to the hard

THE inconveniences here pointed out can never be effectually prevented, but by making academical education a previous step to the profession of the common law, and at the same time making the rudiments of the law a part of academical education. For sciences are of a sociable disposition, and flourish best in the neighbourhood of each other: nor is there any branch of learning, but may be helped and improved by affiftances drawn If therefore the student in our from other arts. laws hath formed both his fentiments and style, by perusal and imitation of the purest classical writers, among whom the historians and orators will best deferve his regard; if he can reason with precision, and separate argument from fallacy, by the clear fimple rules of pure unsophisticated logic; if he can fix his attention, and fleadily pursue truth through any the most intricate deduction by the use of mathematical demonstrations; if he has enlarged his conceptions of nature and art, by a view of the several branches of genuine, experimental, philosophy; if he has impressed on his mind the found maxims of the law of nature, the best and most 中国社

most authentic foundation of human laws; if lastly, he has contemplated those maxims reduced to a practical system in the laws of imperial Rome: if he has done this or any part of it, (though all may be eafily done under as able inftructors as ever graced any feats of learning) a fludent thus qualified may enter upon the study of the laws with incredible advantage and reputation. And if, at the conclusion, or during the acquisition of these accomplishments, he will afford himself here a year or two's farther leifure, to lay the foundation of his future labours in a folid fcientifical method, without thirsting too early to attend that practice which it is impossible he should rightly comprehend, he will afterwards proceed with the greatest ease, and will unfold the most intricate points with an intuitive rapidity and clearness. with a shaker the intent of our beneficial and the

I SHALL not insist upon such motives as might be drawn from principles of ecconomy, and are applicable to particulars only: I reason upon more general topics. And therefore to the qualities of the head, which I have just enumerated, I cannot but add those of the heart; affectionate loyalty to the king, a zeal for liberty and the constitution, a sense of real honour, and well grounded principles of religion; as necessary to form a truly valuable english lawyer, a Hyde, a Hale, or a Talbot. And, whatever the ignorance of some, or undid a

BEFORE I conclude, it may perhaps be expected that I lay before you a short and general account, of the method I propose to follow in endeavouring to execute the trust you have been pleased to repose in my hands. And in these solemn lectures, which are ordained to be read at the entrance of every term, (more perhaps to do public honour to this laudable institution, than for the private instruction of individuals *) I presume it will best answer the intent of our benefactor and the expectation of this learned body, if I attempt to illustrate at times such detached titles of the law. as are the most easy to be understood, and most capable of historical or critical ornament. But in reading the complete courfe, which is annually configned to my care, a more regular method will be necessary; and, till a better is proposed. I shall take the liberty to follow the same that I have already submitted to the public. To fill up and finish that outline with propriety and correctness, and to render the whole intelligible to the uninformed minds of beginners, (whom we are too apt to suppose acquainted with terms and ideas, which they never had opportunity to learn) this must be my ardent endeavour, though by no means my promise to accomplish. You will permit me however very briefly to describe, rather what I conceive an academical expounder of the laws should do, than what I have ever known to be done.

HE should consider his course as a general map of the law, marking out the shape of the country, its connexions and boundaries, its greater divisions and principal cities; it is not his business to describe minutely the subordinate limits, or to fix the longitude and latitude of every inconsiderable hamlet. His attention should be engaged, like that of the readers in Fortescue's inns of chancery, " in trac-" ing out the originals and as it were the elements " of the law." For if, as Justinian * has obferved, the tender understanding of the student be loaded at the first with a multitude and variety of matter, it will either occasion him to defert his studies, or will carry him heavily through them, with much labour, delay, and despondence. These WE WITH THE THEORY PROPERTY.

originals should be traced to their fountains, as well as our diffance will permit; to the customs of the Britons and Germans, as recorded by Cæfar and Tacitus to the codes of the northern nations on the continent, and more especially to those of our own faxon princes; to the rules of the roman law, either left here in the days of Papinian, or imported by Vacarius and his followers; but above all, to that inexhauftible refervoir of legal antiquities and learning, the feodal law, or, as Spelman + has entitled it, the law of the nations in our western orb. These primary rules and fundamental principles should be weighed and compared with the precepts of the law of nature, and the practice of other countries; should be explained by reasons, illustrated by examples, and confirmed by undoubted authorities; their history should be deduced, their changes and revolutions observed, and should be shewn how far they are connected with, or have at any time been affected by, the civil transactions of the kingdom.

A PLAN of this nature, if executed with care and ability, cannot fail of administring a most useful and rational entertainment to students of all ranks and professions; and yet it must be confessed that the study of the laws is not merely a matter of amusement: for as a very judicious

An attention, however, not greater than is usually bestowed in mastering the rudiments of other sciences, or sometimes in purfying a favorite recreation or exercise. And this attention is not equally necessary to be exerted by every student upon every occasion. branches of the law, as the formal process of civil fuits, and the fubtile diffinctions incident to landed property, which are the most difficult to be thoroughly understood, are the least worth the pains of understanding, except to such gentlemen as intend to purfue the profession. LAW is a Rule of Action, prescribed by a superior Power.

NATURAL Law is the Rule of HUMAN Action, prescribed by the Creator, and discoverable by the Light of Reason.

The DIVINE, or REVEALED, Law (confidered as a Rule of Action) is also the Law of Nature, imparted by God himself.

The Law of Nations is that which regulates the Conduct and mutual Intercourse of independent States with each other, by Reason and natural Justice.

MUNICIPAL, or CIVIL, Law is the Rule of civil Conduct, prescribed by the supreme Power in a State, commanding what is RIGHT, and prohibiting what is WRONG.

Society is formed for the Protection of Individuals; and STATES, or Government, for the Prefervation of Society.

7.

In all States there is an absolute SUPREME Power, to which the Right of Legislation belongs; and which, by the singular Constitution of these Kingdoms, is vested in the King, Lords, and Commons.

The Parts of a Law are, 1. The DECLARATORY; which defines what is Right, and Wrong.
2. The DIRECTORY; which confifts in commanding the Observation of Right, or prohibiting the Commission of Wrong. 3. The REMEDIAL; or Method of recovering private Rights, and redressing private Wrongs. 4. The VINDICATORY Sanction of Punishments for public Wrongs; wherein consists the most forcible Obligation of human Laws.

Records, emplained in the Year-Rocks and Reports,

To INTERPRET a Law, we must enquire after the Will of the Maker: Which may be collected either from the Words, the Context, the Subjectmatter, the Effects and Consequence, or the Spirit and Reason of the Law.

From the latter Method of Interpretation arises Equity, or the Correction of that wherein the Law (by reason of its Universality) is deficient.

CHAP. III.

Of the ANTIENT TENURES of Things real.

THE Doctrine of TENURES is derived from the FEODAL Law; which was planted in EUROPE by it's northern Conquerors, at the Dissolution of the ROMAN Empire.

Pure and PROPER FEUDS were Parcels of Land, allotted by a Chief to his Followers; to be held on the Condition of personally rendering due military Service to their Lord.

These were granted by Investiture; were held under the Bond of Fealty; were inheritable only by Descendants; and could not be transferred without the mutual Consent of the Lord and Vasal.

IMPROPER FEUDS were derived from the other; but differed from them in their Original, their Services and Renders, their Descent, and other Circumflances.

The Lands of ENGLAND were converted into Frubs, of the improper Kind, soon after the Norman Conquest: Which gave Rise to the grand Maxim of Tenure; viz. That all lands in the Kingdom are HOLDEN, mediately or immediately, of the King.

The Distinction of Tenures consisted in the Nature of their Services: As, 1. CHIVALRY, or KNIGHT-SERVICE; where the Service was free, but uncertain. 2. FREE SOCAGE; where the Service was free, and certain. 3. Pure VILLENAGE; where the Service was base, and uncertain. 4. PRIVILEGED VILLENAGE, or VILLEIN SOCAGE; where the Service was base, but certain.

7.

The most universal antient Tenure was that in Chivalry, or by Knight's Fee was bound, if the Tenant of every Knight's Fee was bound, if called upon, to attend his Lord to the Wars. This was granted by Livery, and perfected by Homage and Fealty; which usually drew after them Suit of Court.

The other Fruits and Confequences of the Tenure by Knight-Service were, 1. Aid. 2. Relief. 3. Primer Seisin. 4. Wardship. 5. Marriage. 6. Escheat. 7. Fines upon Alienation.

GRAND SERJEANTY differed from Chivalry principally in it's Render, or Service; and not in

it's Fruits and Consequences.

The personal Service in Chivalry was at length gradually changed into pecuniary Assessments, which were called SCUTAGE or Escuage.

eli Addini ve governi programa.

These military Tenures (except the Services of grand Serjeanty) were, at the Restoration of King Charles, totally abolished, and reduced to free Socage, by Act of Parliament.

Of the MODERN TENURES of Things real.

PRee Socage is a Tenure by any free, certain, and determinate Service.

This Tenure, the Relic of Saxon Liberty, includes PETIT SERJEANTY, Tenure in BURGAGE, and GAVELKIND.

Free Socage Lands partake strongly of the seodal Nature, as well as those in Chivalry: Being holden; holden; subject to some Service, — at the least, to Fealty and Suit of Court; subject to Relief, to Wardship, and to Escheat; but not to Marriage; subject also formerly to Aids, primer Seisin, and Fines for Alienation.

PURE VILLENAGE was a precarious and flavish Tenure, at the absolute Will of the Lord, upon uncertain Services of the basest Nature.

From hence, by tacit Consent or Encroachment, have arisen the modern Copyholds, or Tenure by Copy of Court Roll; in which Lands may be still held at the (nominal) Will of the Lord, (but regulated) according to the Custom of the Manor.

These are subject, like Socage Lands, to Services, Relief, and Escheat; and also to Heriotse Wardship, and Fines upon Descent and Alienation.

7,

PRIVILEGED VILLENAGE, OF VILLEIN SOCAGE is an exalted Species of copyhold Tenure, upon base, but certain, Services; subsisting only in the antient Demesnes of the Crown; whence the Tenure is denominated the Tenure in ANTIENT DEMESNE.

These Copyholds, of antient Demesne, have divers Immunities annexed to their Tenure; but are still held by Copy of Court Roll, according to the Custom of the Manor, though not at the Will of the Lord.

An Estate for YEARS is where a Man, seised of Lands and Tenements, letteth them to another for a certain Period of Time, which transfers the Interest of the Term; and the Lessee enters thereon, which gives him Possession of the Term, but not legal Seisin of the Land.

Incident to this Estate are Estovers; and also Emblements, if it determines before the full End of the Term.

An Estate at WILL is where Lands are let by one Man to another, to hold at the Will of both Parties; and the Lessee enters thereon.

COPYHOLDS are Estates held at the Will of the Lord, (regulated) according to the Custom of the Manor.

An Estate at SUFFERANCE is where one comes into into Possession of Land by lawful Title, but keeps it afterwards without any Title at all.

Estates on Condition, (which may, or may not, be freehold) are, 1. On Condition IMPLIED.

2. On Condition EXPRESSED. 3. Estates in Gage.

4. Estates by Statute, merchant or staple. 5. Estates by Elegit.

Estates on Condition IMPLIED are where a Grant of an Estate has, from it's Essence and Constitution, a Condition inseparably annexed to it; though none be expressed in Words.

Estates on Condition EXPRESSED are where an express Qualification or Provision is annexed to the Grant of an Estate: On the Breach or Nonperformance of which Conditions, either expressed or implied, the Estate so granted may be deseated.

10.

Estates in GAGE, in Vadio, or in Pledge, are Estates granted as a Security for Money lent; being, i. PRIVATE WRONGS, or CIVIL INJURIES, are an Infringement, or Privation, of the civil Rights of Individuals, confidered as Individuals.

The REDRESS of civil Injuries is one principal Object of the Laws of England:

This Redress is effected by, 1. The mere Act of the Parties. 2. The mere Operation of Law. 3. By Both together, or Suit in Courts.

REDRESS, by the mere ACT of the PARTIES, is that which arises, 1. From the SOLE Act of the Party injured. 2. From the JOINT Act of all the Parties.

Of the first fort are, 1. Self defence. 2. Recaption of Goods. 3. Entry on Lands and Tenements. 4. Abatement of Nuisances. 5 Diftress: for rent, or for Damage. 6. Seifing of Heriots, &zc.

Of the fecond Sort are, I Accord. 2. Arbitration.

REDRESS, effected by the mere OPERATION of LAW, is, 1. Where a Creditor is Executor or Administrator, and is thereupon allowed to retain his own Debt. 2. In the case of Remitter; where one. who has a GOOD Title to Lands, &c. comes into Possession by a BAD one, and is thereupon remitted to his antient good Title, which protects his ill-acquired Possession.

A CRIME, or MISDEMESNOR, is an Act committed, or omitted, in Violation of a public Law, either forbidding or commanding it.

Crimes are diffinguished from civil Injuries, in that they are a Breach and Violation of the PUBLIC. Rights, due to the whole Community, considered as a Community.

A LL Persons are CAPABLE of committing Crimes, unless there be in them a DEFECT of WILL: For, to constitute a legal Crime, there must be both a vitious Will, and a vitious Act.

The Will does not concur with the Act, 1. Where there is a Defect of UNDERSTANDING. 2. Where no Will is EXERTED. 3. Where the Act is constrained by Force and Violence.

A vitious Will may therefore be wanting, in the Cases of, 1. Infancy. 2. Ideocy, or Lunacy. 3. Drunkenness; which doth not, however, excuse. 4. Missortune, or Chancemedley. 5. Ignorance, or Mistake of Fact. 6. Compulsion, or Necessity: which is, 1st, that of civil Subjection; 2dly, that of Duress per Minas; 3dly, that of choosing the least pernicious of two Evils, where one is unavoidable; 4thly, that of Want, or Hunger; which is no legitimate Excuse.

The King, from his Excellence and Dignity, is also incapable of doing Wrong.

The different DEGREES of Guilt in Criminals are, 1. As PRINCIPALS. 2. As ACCESSORIES.

6.

A PRINCIPAL in a Crime is, 1. He who commits the Fact. 2. He who is present at, aiding, and abetting, the Commission.

7.

An Accessory is he who doth not commit the Fact, nor is present at the Commission, but is in some fort concerned therein, either BEFORE or AFTER.

Accessories can only be in petit Treason, and Felony: In high Treason, and Misdemesnors, all are Principals.

An Accessory, BEFORE the Fact, is one who, being absent when the Crime is committed, hath procured, counselled, or commanded another to commit it.

TO

An Accessory, AFTER the Fact, is where a Perfon, knowing a Felony to have been committed, receives, relieves, comforts, or affists the Felon. Such Accessory is usually entitled to the Benefit of Clergy; where the Principal, and Accessory BE-FORB the Fact, are excluded from it.

OR the better understanding of the annexed TABLE of Consanguinity, it may be proper to obferve, that Consanguinity is twofold; Li-NEAL, and COLLATERAL.

In LINEAL CONSANGUINITY every Generation makes a different Degree; as is fufficiently obvious upon mere Inspection of the TABLE. And this, being the only natural Way of reckoning the Degrees in the direct Line, obtains univerfally in the civil, canon, and common Laws.

WITH regard to COLLATERAL CONSANGUINITY, there are two Ways of reckoning the Degrees of it. The Civilians a, in order to fettle the Degree of Kindred be- a Fr. 38. 10. 10. tween two Persons, count UPWARDS from either of them §. 3. to the common Stock or Ancestor, from whom both are descended; and then DOWNWARDS again to the other; reckoning a Degree for each Person, both ascending and descending. In this TABLE, (which is no other than the Arbor Confanguinitatis usually printed with the Bodies of civil and canon Law,) all the collateral Degrees are expressed, to the TENTH of the Civilians, and the SEVENTH of the Canonists, inclusive; the former being distinguished by the Roman Numerals, the latter by the common Figures.

IF, for Instance, it be enquired, in what Degree the Person marked A is related to the Propositus, by the civil Computation; we must count from the Propositus, upwards, to the Abavus, FOUR; then, downwards, from the Abavus to A, the Person enquired after, FIVE more; in the Whole, NINE: So that he is related to the Proposition.

Explanation of the TABLE of DESCENTS.

THE TABLE of DESCENTS is intended to exhibit to the Eye of the Student, the successive Order, in which he must search for the Heir of a Person (as JOHN STILES) who dies seised of an Estate in Fee simple.

Ir fuch' Estate came to him by his own Acquisition, or Purchase, and not by Descent from any of his Anceftors, then in the first Place succeeds the eldest Son, Matthew Stiles, or his Issue: (No. 1.) If his Line be extinct, then Gilbert Stiles and the other Sons, respectively, in Order of Birth, or their Issue. (No. .2). In Default of these, ALL the Daughters together, Margaret and Charlotte Stiles, or their Issue. (No. 3.) - On Failure of the Descendants of JOHN STILES himself, the Issue of Geoffery and Lucy Stiles, his Parents, is called in : viz. First, Francis Stiles, the eldeft Brother of the whole Blood, or his Issue: (No. 4.) Then Oliver Stiles, and the other whole Brothers, respectively, in Order of Birth, or their Iffue: (No. 5.) Then the Sifters of the whole Blood, ALL together, Bridget and Alice Stiles, or their Iffue. (No. 6.) - In Defect of these, the Issue of George and Cecilia Stiles, his Father's Parents; Respect being still had to their Age and Sex: (No. 7.) Then the Issue of Walter and Christian Stiles, the Parents of his paternal Grandfather: (No. 8.) Then the Iffue of Richard and Anne Stiles the Parents of his paternal Grandfather's Father: (No, 9.) And so on in the paternal Grandfather's paternal Line, or Blood of Walter Stiles, in infinitum. In Defect of these, the Issue of William and Jane Smith. the Parents of his paternal Grandfather's Mother: (No. 10.) And so on in the paternal Grandfather's maternal Line, or Blood of Christian Smith, in infinitum; till both the immediate Bloods of George Stiles, the paternal Grandfather, are fpent. - Then we must refort to the Isfue of Luke and Francis Kempe, the Parents of JOHN STILES's paternal Grandmother: (No. 11.) Then to the Isfue of Thomas and Sarah Kempe, the Parents of his paternal Grandmother's Father: (No. 12.) And fo on in the paternal No. II.

Grandmother's paternal Line, or Blood of Luke Kempe, in infinitum. — In Default of which, we must call in the Issue of Charles and Mary Holland, the Parents of his paternal Grandmother's Mother: (No. 13.) And so on in the paternal Grandmother's maternal Line, or Blood of Frances Holland, in infinitum; 'till both the immediate Bloods of Cecilia Kempe, the paternal Grandmother, are also spent.

Whereby the PATERNAL Blood of JOHN STILES entirely failing, Recourse must then, and not before, be had to his MATERNAL Relations: or the Blood of the Bakers, (No. 14, 15, 16.) Willis's, (No. 17.) Thorpes, (No. 18. 19.) and Whites; (No. 20.) in the same regular fuccessive Order as in the paternal Line.

In case John Stiles was not himself the Purchasor. but the Estate in fact came to him by Descen'r from his Father, Mother, or any higher Ancestor, there is this Difference: that the Blood of that Line of Ancestors, from which it did not descend, can never inherit; but the Estate shall rather escheat to the Lord of the Fee. Thus if it descended from Geoffery Stiles, the Father, the Blood of Lucy Baker, the Mother, is perpetually excluded: And so, vice versa, if it descended from Lucy Baker, it cannot descend to the Blood of Geoffery Stiles. This, in either case, cuts off one half of the TABLE from Succesfion: And further, if it can be shewn to have descended from George Stiles, this cuts off three fourths: for now the Blood not only of Lucy Baker, but also of Cecilia Kempe, is excluded. It, lastly, it descended from Walter Stiles, this narrows the Succession still more, and cuts off seven eighths of the TABLE; for now, neither the Blood of Lucy Baker, nor of Cecilia Kempe, nor of Christian Smith, can ever succeed to the Inheritance. And the like Rule will hold upon Descents from any other Ancestors.

THE Student should bear in Mind, that, during this whole Process, John Stiles is the only Person supposed to have been actually seised of the Estate: For if ever it comes to be vested in any other Person, as Heir to John Stiles, a new Order of Succession must be observed upon the Death of such Heir; since He, by his own Seisin, now becomes himself an Ancestor, or Stipes, and must be put in the place of John Stiles. The Figures therefore denote the Order, in which the several Classes would succeed to John Stiles, and not to each other;

And.

And, before we fearch for an Heir in any of the higher Figures, as (No, 8.) we must be first assured that all the lower Classes (from No. 1 to 7.) were extinct, at John STILES'S Decease.

No. II.

SUCH is apprehended to be the uniform Course of Inheritance, according to the Law of ENGLAND. The Student should however be informed, that the Class, No. 10. would be postponed to No. 11, in consequence of the Doctrine laid down, arguendo, by Justice Manwood, in the Case of CLERE and BROOK Ed; from whence it is a- d PLOWD. 450. dopted by Lord BACON, and Sir MATTHEW HALE, f. e Flem. c. 1. -And yet, notwithstanding these respectable Authorities, f Hist. C. L. the Compiler of this TABLE hath ventured to give the 240, 244. Preference therein to No. 10 before No. 11; for the following Reasons:

1. BECAUSE this Point was not the PRINCIPAL Queftion in the Case of CLERE and BROOKE; but the Law concerning it is delivered obiter only, and in the course of Argument, by Justice Manwood; though afterwards faid to be confirmed by the three other Justices in separate, extrajudicial, Conferences with the Reporter.

2. BECAUSE the Chief- Justice, DYER, in reporting the Resolution of the Court in what seems to be the same Cafe g takes no Notice of this Doctrine.

3. BECAUSE it appears, from PLOWDEN'S Report, that very many Gentlemen of the Law were diffatisfied with this Polition of Justice MANWOOD.

4. BECAUSE the Position itself destroys the otherwise entire and regular Symmetry of our legal Course of Descents, as is manifest by inspecting the TABLE; and destroys also that constant Preference of the male Stocks in the Law of Inheritance, for which perhaps an additional Reason might be given, besides the mere Dignity of Blood.

5. BECAUSE it introduces all that Uncertainty and Contradiction, pointed out by an ingenious Author b; b Law of Inheand establishes a collateral Doctrine, incompatible with ritances, 2d Edit. the principal Point resolved in the Case of CLERE and P. 30, 38, 61, BROOKE, viz, the Preference of No. 11 to No. 14. And, though that learned Writer proposes to rescind the PRINCIPAL Point then resolved, in order to clear this Difficulty; it is apprehended, that the Difficulty

No. II.

may be better cleared, by rejecting the COLLATERAL

Doctrine, which was never yet refolved at all.

6. BECAUSE by the Reason that is given for this Doctrine, in PLOWDEN, BACON, and HALE, (viz. That in any Degree, paramount the first, the Law respecteth Proximity, and not Dignity of Blood,) No. 18 ought also to be preferred to No. 16; which is directly contrary to

i Hift. C. L. 247.

the eighth Rule laid down by HALE himself i. 7. BECAUSE this Polition feems to contradict the allowed Doctrine of Sir EDWARD Coke ; who lays it down HAWE. Abr. in (under different Names) that the Blood of the KEMPES (alias SANDIES) shall not inherit till the Blood of the STILES'S (alias FAIRFIELDS) fail. Now the Blood of the STILES's does certainly not fail, till both No. 9. and No. 10 are extinct. Wherefore No. 11 (being the Blood of the KEMPES) ought not to inherit till then.

8. BECAUSE in the Case, M. 12 Ed. IV. 14. 1 (much relied on in that of CLERE and BROOKE) it is laid down as a Rule, that " Ceftuy, que doit inheriter al Pere, doit in-" beriter al Fils." And fo Sit M. HALE " fays, " that " though the Law excludes the Father from inheriting, yet " it substitutes and directs the Descent, as it should have " been, had the Father inherited." Now it it is fettled, by the Resolution in CLERE and BROOKE, that No. 10 should have inherited to Geoffery Stiles, the Father, before No. 11; and therefore No. 10 ought also to be preferred in inheriting to JOHN STILES, the Son.

Declatation, or Count.

Berks, I GEORGE Saunders, late of Sutton in the to wit. (County aforesaid, Gentleman, was attached to answer Richard Smith, of a Plea, whereof with Force and Arms he entered into one Messuage, with the Appurtenances, in Sutton, which John Rogers, Esquire, hath demised to the said Richard for a Term which is not yet expired, and ejected him from his faid Farm, and other Wrongs to him did, to the great Damage of the faid Richard, and against the Peace of the Lord the King that now is. AND WHEREUPON the faid Richard by Robert Martin his Attorney complains, that whereas the faid John Rogers on the first Day of October in the twenty ninth Year of the Reign of the Lord the King that now is, at Sutton aforesaid, had demised to the same Richard the Tenement aforesaid, with the Appurtenances, to have and to hold the faid Tenement, with the Appurtenances, to the faid Richard and his Affigns, from the Feast of Saint Michael the Archangel then last past, to the End and Term of five Years from thence next following and fully to be complete and ended; by virtue of which Demife the faid Richard entered into the faid Tenement, with the Appurtenances, and was thereof possessed; and, the said Richard being so possessed thereof, the said George afterwards, that is to fay, on the first Day of October in the faid twenty ninth Year, with Force and Arms, that is to fay, with Swords, Staves, and Knives, entered into the faid Tenement, with the Appurtenances, which the faid John Rogers demised to the faid Richard in Form aforesaid for the Term aforesaid which is not yet expired, and ejected the faid Richard out of his faid Farm, and other Wrongs to him did, to the great Damage of the faid Richard, and against the Peace of the said Lord the King; whereby the faid Richard faith that he is injured and endamaged to the Value of twenty Pounds: And thereupon he brings Suit, [and good Proof.] AND the aforesaid George Saunders, by Charles Defence.

Charles Newman his Attorney, comes and defends the No. VIII. Force and Injury, when [and where the Court shall award ; and faith that he is in no wife guilty of the Tref- Plea, Not Guilpass and Ejectment aforesaid, as the said Richard above ty. complains against him; and thereof he puts himself up- Issue. on the Country; and the faid Richard doth likewise the fame: THEREFORE let a Jury come thereupon before Venire awarded, the Lord the King, on the Octave of the Purification of the Bleffed Virgin Mary, wherefoever he shall then be in England; who neither [are of Kin to the said Richard, nor to the said George;] to recognize [whether the said George be guilty of the Trespass and Ejectment aforesaid:] Because as well [the said George, as the said Richard, between whom the Difference is, have put themselves on the faid Jury.] The same Day is there given to the Parties aforesaid. AFTERWARDS the Process therein, being Respite, for Decontinued between the faid Parties of the Plea aforefaid fault of Jurors. by the Jury, is put between them in Respite, before the Lord the King, until the Day of Easter in fifteen Days, wherefoever the faid Lord the King shall then be in England; unless the Justices of the Lord the King assigned to Nife Prius. take Assises in the County aforesaid, shall have come before that time, to wit, on Monday the eighth of March, at Reading in the faid County, by the Form of the Statute [in that case provided,] by reason of the Default of the Jurors [fummoned to appear as aforefaid.] At which Day before the Lord the King at Westminster, come the Parties aforesaid by their Attorneys aforesaid; and the aforesaid Justices of Assise, before whom [the Jury aforesaid came,] sent here their Record before them had in these Words, to wit : AFTERWARDS, at the Day and Place within contained, P. sea. before Heneage Legge, Esquire, one of the Barons of the Exchequer of the Lord the King, and Sir John Eardly Wilmot, Knight, one of the Justices of the said Lord the King, affigned to hold Pleas before the King himself, Justices of the faid Lord the King, affigned to take Affifes in the County of Berks by the Form of the Statute [in that case provided,] come as well the within named Richard Smith, as the within written George Saunders, by their Attorneys within contained; and the Jurors of the Jury whereof Mention is within made being called, certain of them, to wit, Charles Holloway, John Hooke, Peter Grabam, Henry Cox, William Brown, and Francis Oakler, come, and are fworn upon that Jury: And because the Rest of the Jurors of the same Jury did not appear, therefore others of the Verdict, for the the aforefaid George Saunders is guilty of the Trespass and Ejectment within written, in Manner and Form as the aforesaid Richard Smith within complains against him; and affels the Damages of the faid Richard Smith, on Occafion of that Trespais and Ejectment, besides his Costs and Charges by him put unto about his Suit in that Behalf, to twelve Pence; and, for those Costs and Charges, to forty Shillings. WHEREUPON the faid Richard Smith, by his Attorney aforesaid, prayeth Judgment against the said George Saunders, in and upon the Verdict aforefaid by the Motion in Arrest Jurors aforesaid given in the Form aforesaid: And the said George Saunders, by his Attorney aforesaid, saith that the Court here ought not to proceed to give Judgment upon the faid Verdict, and prayeth that Judgment against him the faid George Saunders, in and upon the Verdict aforefaid by the Jurors aforesaid given in the Form aforesaid, may be stayed, by reason that the said Verdict is insufficient and erroneous, and that the faid Verdict may be quashed, and that the Issue aforesaid may be tried a-new by other Jurors to be afresh impanelled. And, because the Court of the Lord the King here is not yet advised of giving their Judgment of and upon the Premises, therefore Day thereof. is given as well to the faid Richard Smith as the faid George Saunders, before the Lord the King, untill the Morrow of the Afcention of our Lord, wherefoever the faid Lord the King shall then be in England, to hear their Judgment of and upon the Premises, for that the Court of the Lord the King is not yet advised thereof. At which Day before the Lord the King at Westminster, come the Parties aforesaid by their Attorneys aforesaid: Upon which, the Record and Matters aforesaid having been seen, and by the Court of the Lord the King now here fully understood, and all and fingular the Premises having been examined, No. VIII. and mature Deliberation being had thereupon, for that it feems to the Court of the Lord the King now here that Opinion of the the Verdict aforesaid is in no wise insufficient or erroneous, and that the same ought not to be quashed, and that no new Trial ought to be had of the Issue aforesaid, THERE- Judgment for FORE IT IS CONSIDERED, that the faid Richard do recover against the said George his Term yet to come, of and in the faid Tenements, with the Appurtenances, and the faid Damages affeffed by the faid Jury in Form aforefaid, and also twenty seven Pounds fix Shillings and eight Costs. Pence for his Costs and Charges aforesaid, by the Court of the Lord the King here awarded to the faid Richard, with his Affent, by way of Increase; which said Damages in the Whole, amount to twenty nine Pounds, seven Shillings, and eight Pence. Writ.

Oxon. CHARLES Long, late of Burford in the Counto wit. Ity aforesaid, Gentleman, was summoned to answer William Burton of Yarnton in the said County, Gentleman, of a Plea that he render unto him two hundred Pounds, which he owes him and unjustly detains, [as he saith.] AND WHEREUPON the said William, by Thomas Gough his Attorney, complains, that whereas on the first Day of December, in the Year of our Lord one thousand, seven hundred, and fifty four, at Banbury in this County, the said Charles by his Writing obligatory did acknowlege himself to be bound to the said William in the said Sum of two hundred Pounds of lawful Money of Great Britain, to be paid to the said William, whenever after the faid Charles should be thereto required: nevertheless the said Charles (although often required) hath not paid to the faid William the faid Sum of two hundred Pounds, not any Part thereof, but hitherto altogether hath refused, and doth still refuse, to render the same : wherefore he faith that he is injured, and hath Damage, to the Value of ten Pounds: And thereupon he brings Suit, [and good Proof.] AND he brings here into Court Profest in Caria. the Writing obligatory aforesaid; which testifies the Debt aforefaid in Form aforefaid; the Date whereof is the Day and Year beforementioned. AND the aforefaid Charles, by Defence. At which Day, to wit, on the Octave of the holy Trinity, here come as well the faid William Burton as the faid Charles Long, by their Attorneys aforesaid: And hereupon the faid William prays that the faid Charles may answer to his Writ and Count aforesaid. And the aforesaid Charles defends the Force and Injury, when, &c. and faith, THAT the faid William ought not to have or maintain his faid Action against him, because he faith, that the said David Stiles and Henry Bacon, the Arbitrators before named in the faid Condition, did not make any fuch Award, Arbitrament, Order, Rule, Judgment, final End, or Determination, of or in the Premises above specified in the said Condition, on or before the first Day of January, in the Condition aforesaid sabove mentioned, according to the Form and Effect of the faid Condition: And this he is ready to verify. Wherefore he prays Judgment, whether the faid William ought to have or maintain his faid Action thereof against him; [and that he may go thereof without a Day.] AND the aforesaid William saith, that, for any thing above alleged by the faid Charles in Pleading, he ought not to be precluded from having his faid! Action thereof against him; because he faith, that after the making of the faid Writing obligatory, and before the faid first Day of Tanuary, to wit, on the twenty fixth Day of December, in the Year aforesaid, at Banbury aforesaid, in the Presence of two credible Witnesses, namely, John Dew of Charlbury, in the County aforesaid, and Richard Morris of Wightham in the County of Berks, the faid Arbitrators undertook the Charge of the Award, Arbitrament, Order, Rule, Judgment, final End, and Determination aforefaid, of and in the Premises specified in the Condition aforesaid, and then and there made and published their Award by Word of Mouth in Manner and Form following, that is to fay; the faid Arbitrators did award, order, and adjudge, that he the faid Charles Long should forthwith pay to the faid William Burton the Sum of seventy five Pounds, and that thereupon all Differences between them at the time of the making the faid Writing obligatory should finally cease and determine. And the faid William further faith, that although he afterwards, to wit on the fixth Day of Januaey, in the Year of our Lord one thousand, seven hundred, and fifty five, at Banbury aforesaid, requested the said

Charles to pay to him the faid William the faid seventy five Pounds, yet (by Protestation that the said Charles hath not flood to, obeyed, observed, fulfilled, or kept any Protestando. part of the said Award, which by him the said Charles ought to have been stood to, obeyed, observed, fulfilled, and kept) for further Plea therein he faith, that the faid Charles the said seventy sive Pounds to the said William had not hitherto paid: And this he is ready to verify. Wherefore he prays Judgment, and his Debt aforesaid, together with his Damages occasioned by the Detention of the faid Debt, to be adjudged unto him, &c. AND the aforesaid Charles saith, that the Plea aforesaid, by him the faid William in Manner and Form aforefaid above in his Replication pleaded, and the Matter in the same contained, are in no wife sufficient in Law for the said William to have or maintain his Action aforesaid thereupon against him the faid Charles, to which the faid Charles hath no Necessity, neither is he obliged by the Law of the Land, in any manner to answer: And this he is ready to werify. Wherefore, for want of a fufficient Replication in this behalf, the faid Charles, as aforefaid, prays Judgment, and that the aforesaid William may be precluded from having his Action aforesaid thereupon against him, &c. And the said Charles Causes of Deaccording to the Form of the Statute in that case made murrer. and provided, shews to the Court here the Causes of Demurrer following; to wit, that it doth not appear, by the Replication aforesaid, that the said Arbitrators made the fame Award in the presence of two credible Witnesses on or before the faid first Day of January, as they ought to have done, according to the Form and Effect of the Condition aforesaid; and that the Replication aforesaid is uncertain, infufficient, and wants Form. AND the aforesaid Joinder in De-William faith, that the Plea aforefaid by him the faid Wil-murrer. liam in Manner and Form aforesaid above in his Replication pleaded, and the Matter in the same contained, are good and fufficient in Law for the faid William to have and maintain the faid Action of him the faid William thereupon against the said Charles; which said Plea, and the Matter therein contained, the said William is ready to verify and prove as the Court shall award: And because the aforesaid Charles hath not answered to that Plea, nor hath he hitherto in any manner denied the same, the said William as before prays Judgment, and his Debt aforesaid, together with his Damages occasioned by the Detention of M 3

that Debt, to be adjudged unto him, &c. AND BECAUSE the lustices here will advise themselves of and upon the Premises before they give Judgment thereupon, a Day is thereupon given to the Parties aforesaid here, until the Morrow of All-Souls, to hear their Judgment thereupon, for that the faid Justices here are not yet advised thereof. At which Day here come as well the faid Charles as the faid William, by their faid Attorneys; and because the said Justices here will further advise themselves of and upon the Premises before they give Judgment thereupon, a Day is farther given to the Parties aforelaid here until the Octave of Saint Hilary, to hear their Judgment thereupon, for that the faid Justices here are not yet advised thereof. At which Day here come as well the faid William Burton as the faid Charles Long, by their faid Attorneys: WHEREFORE, the Record and Matters aforefaid having been feen, and by the Justices here fully understood, and all and singular the Premises being examined, and mature Deliberation being had thereupon; for that it feems to the faid Justices here, that the faid Plea of the faid William Burton before in his Replication pleaded, and the Matter therein contained, are not fufficient in Law, to have and maintain the Action of the aforesaid William against the aforesaid Charles; THEREFORE IT IS CONSIDERED, that the aforefaid William take nothing by this Writ aforesaid, but that he and his Pledges of profecuting, to wit, John Doe and Richard Roe, be in Mercy for his false Complaint, and that the aforesaid Charles go thereof without a Day, &c.
